

Conflict Minerals Policy Statement of Concurrent Computer Corporation

As a global integrated solutions provider, Concurrent procures the hardware components of its solutions from a wide variety of suppliers.

Concurrent recognizes that many of our customers are subject to the 2010 Dodd-Frank Act regarding the use of Conflict Minerals and the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Rules implementing its disclosure requirements. Concurrent understands the importance of this issue to its customers and is committed to supporting their efforts in the traceability and transparency of the supply chain. As such, we have adopted a formal process and perform ongoing screening of our supply chain. Concurrent has collected and evaluated responsive information from over 70% of our key suppliers.

Concurrent does not directly purchase Conflict Minerals from any source and to the extent that components of our integrated solutions may include products that contain Conflict Minerals, Concurrent is committed to this disclosure process in order to maintain transparency regarding the origin and traceability of Conflict Minerals contained in these products. As a result of the information gathered in this process, Concurrent cannot certify that the hardware components sold as part of our integrated solutions products are 'DRC conflict free.'

Concurrent will regularly update this Conflict Minerals Policy Statement.

Should you have any questions about Concurrent's Conflict Minerals Policy Statement, please submit them to conflict_minerals@ccur.com.

March 19, 2015